

Citizen Smith acoustic night

April 29th saw Citizen Smith's at Putney put on a acoustic evening there were 5 acts altogether. Two acts caught my eyes and ears, first was a young guy from Leeds called 'acoustic Joe', he was a young chisel feature kinda of guy the one the girls would definately go for. he sang his own songs all to do with things and life in General, a sort of cross between Cat Stevens and Micheal Buble, could have done with a bit more up tempo non depressing tunes but im sure as time goes by these songs will appear in his repitoir. look out for this guy worth a look as his vocals are smooth and clean. The Second artist was a Miss Gemma Mewse, well what a character, whilst the sound engineer was setting up they had music playing through the P.A, She along with a few others were just having a ball dancing, and generally larking about but it was all done in good taste and looked although it was all choreographed, but wasn't !!! considering she was about to do a Live acoustic set in front of a packed house this young lady was sure cool, and when she started with her opening song 'Stranger Things' the vocals and confidence was like a seasoned act. although only just 18 she was singing and performing like someone who's been doing it for forty years, They say that you can tell a good vocalist when stripped down to the basic's, just guitar and voice, and Miss Mewse certainly can hold a tune, her Ballad's were outstandingly well controlled from someone that young, and cant imagine how she is going to sound by the time she's 25. If you get a chance to see miss Mewse then you'll be in for a enjoyable time.
